1. In March or April 1961 the Chinese Communist naval intelligence office recruited, for the second time, sixty male and female students to undergo training at the "Kwangtung Sea Defense Training Class of the Naval Intelligence Bureau of the Central People's Government," which is located at Nan Shan Wei (南山嘴) in the central part of the Wanshan Islands, outside of the Delta of the Pearl River. These students are from Kwangtung, Kwangsi, Fukien, Hunan, and Chekiang Provinces.
2. The training period is for four months and is divided into two parts. During the first two months, training will consist of technical training including shooting. Shooting practice will be performed in a low area on the island near the T'ung Hsin Chou (洞心洲), near the school compound. Three times a week Soviet instructors, most of whom are police school graduates, will give instructions to the students. T'ANG I-chen (唐一晨), in addition to giving technical instructions, will give lectures on present statesmen in foreign countries. During the last two months, students will be transferred to T'ang Chia Wan (塘家湾) in Chungshan Hsien (113-36, 22-22) for training in various subjects including the doctrines of Marx and Lenin. After the students finish this training, they will be given one month's practice at Nan Shan Wei, during which each student will use a "real human being" as his target (sic). These targets will be shipped to the island by boat from T'ang Chia Wan.
3. The training school is to open on 20 May and all students are required to be at T'ang Chia Wan prior to 17 May. Students are told not to take too much baggage because almost all their requirements will be furnished by the school. After graduation students must first go to T'ang Chia Wan and proceed from there to their areas of operation.
